Scouts Preparing for Jamboree To Be Held Here Next Summer

For the Scouting world of Southern California, the next five months are to be full of thinking and working on the mammoth July event, the Third National Scout Jamboree. Jamboree time, which is slated for July 17 to 23, will see local Scouts serving as hosts to fellow Scouts from all over the United States. There are plans which have been brewing for the past six months, on how the 50,000 Scouters will be cared for during the week-long camp. Place for the Jamboree is the historic Irvine Ranch, whose acreage high on the hills above Newport Bay, will make a natural spot for the huge tent-city that is to be built. There will be all the facilities of a modern town set up for the Jamboree on territory that is now rolling countryside. 40 Places Left Already the 1100 places available for Scouts from the Los Angeles Boy Scout Council area are nearly full. Last reports are that there are only 40 spots still available for local leaders wishing to attend. Cost of the National Jamboree for each Scout is $85, and according to Albert H. Moulter, district Scout executive for Harbor District, many of the boys are planning to earn their Jamboree fee themselves during the next few months. Nationally prominent men will be present at the Irvine Ranch Scout headquarters during the event. There will be national coverage by every form of communication, and from all indications the Jamboree should be long remembered by every Scout or fortunate to be on hand for it. Activities Planned Rodeos, ranch activities, pageants, gigantic campfires, festive fireworks... all will be part of the memorable fun planned for the Jamboree. And, of course, every boy will have his chance to take a dip in the waters of the blue Pacific.
